

ABSTRACT

The invention concerns granules consisting of lactose and starch having a friability of less than or equal to 80%, preferably to 60%, according to a test A.

It also concerns the process of preparation of such granules as well as their use for the preparation of solid forms in the pharmaceutical or in the food industries.